“ When I was being trained to sing by Debbie, Christine would always been in the music room after school and we shared so many stories about how we would get married in huge wedding dresses and we'd talk about pageants and stuff, I think one time we even talked about hair extensions.

She was a blessed little girl and we talked more than I thought we did now that I think about it. She will truly be missed and she will be watching over all of us now.

“ Our deepest sympathies at your loss. We do not know why Our Savior takes our young but we do know he has promised we will be together again in that wonderful place prepared for us. May God give you strength to ease your pain. The hurt will lessen, but never goes away. We lost our son at age 11, just over 25 years ago, and some days it seems like it was just yesterday. Tears are for us, because we lost, but tears can turn to joy as we realize they are at peace, nobody can harm them in this world. Again, please accept our sympathies and may you find peace by keeping the memories alive. Share each day, the good things you remember and she will be in your hearts forever. Deb, Alan. Ben and extended family,

*There are no words that will take the pain away. Having been through this myself all I can tell you is that over time the pain does lesson. God did not take Christine from you...he was there to take her hand when she died. What you will go through now won't be easy, but you will begin to live on the fond memories you she has left you. I still cannot understand all of this myself...it seems so wrong to have to bury our children no matter what the cause of their death is. Do not be afraid to talk about her...people will be nervous about it but just let them know you are okay talking about her and remembering her. You must keep her memories alive to survive this tragedy. I will never forget my thoughts of her when I would see her in church on thinking how beautiful and friendly she was. :) You have our deepest sympathy.
