“ It’s been a struggle trying to accept the reality of this tragic loss. Thousands of miles of separation have been a catalyst for thousands of “this just can’t be real” thoughts over the past few days. Memories of Jessica have flashed without the discolor of time...a vivid memory of a beautiful baby girl cooing in her car seat, a vivid memory of a laughing toddler jumping on the trampoline, a vivid memory of that same girl glowing while she lovingly admired the baby she created, Mason. Jessica knew how to love and, more importantly, how to show her love. I always admired her loving and endearing words for her late grandmother, often missing the mother-daughter relationship between them. I imagine her grandmother answered her knock on heaven’s door and the reunion brought many tears of joy and glorious celebration. The exclamation, “Jess-n-James”, often written was witness to her love and devotion to her best friend. The adoring and protective looks she always gave her little brother testified to the incredible love and responsibility she felt for him. Mason, the absolute love and joy of her life, made Jessica absolutely radiate with adoration and awe for her little man. Jessica genuinely loved her family and friends. It’s said, to sincerely love is to receive a glimpse of heaven, Jessica certainly had an extensive preview of her eternity. Comfort comes with the understanding that love is a forever promise, when it’s time for her loved ones to knock on that heavenly door, Jessica will be there keeping her promise. Until then, our hearts are filled with love and memories, and we’ll miss her until we meet again.

“ Jess n I had many memories together... the best one I think is when we stood on the corner by my grandma's bar n she told car's that were at the 4 way they had a flat tire! Lol she loved hanging out with me n my kid's... She could make me in a good mood anytime I was down... but her worst thing was being on time or saying she was on her way but hadn't even left the house yet... haha Jess, I miss you sooo much already... rip bestie... until we meet again... :(I love you!

“ Donnie, I remember holding your little baby when she was born, as we anticipated the birth of our own baby, Stephanie. I remember Caryl remarking how the baby would stop crying instantly when I held her, and how I took a shine to her. I am aware that Jessica's mom passed away last year too.
Unfortunately, Baby Stephanie passed away this past September at age 30, and now you grieve for Baby Jessica. I grieve with you, Donnie. We were there together when our babies first came into the world and we now share grief as fathers.
Hang in there, my friend. There are brighter days ahead - trust me. Trust God to pull you through.
